

Task 1

By taking the Web Development Bootcamp, I have been introduced to JavaScript and some HTML, and will further be learning CSS, Node.js and React.js. One of the most important skills that I am developing through this process is problem-solving and creating algorithms before even starting to code, which will be extremely beneficial in the working world, in any form of employment.

I would be interested in pursuing self-employed freelance opportunities on completion of this bootcamp, when I would have the new skills of developing the front and back-end of websites, and coding for mobile optimisation. I would use sites such as Upworks, Fiver, and Freelancer to secure these opportunities. An example I have seen on Upworks is a request for a Web Developer to create a website with a few pages on it, paying $500. There are also opportunities to create smaller scale programmes ranging between $100-$200.

I would also potentially be interested in pursuing a design route, as a UX/UI designer. I have some experience in the visual side of this, however, until this course, have not had any tech experience that would make me fit for such a role. I am excited to combine my new-found knowledge and the knowledge I am expecting to gain in this process with the skills and experience I already have, to take me to the next level.
